Editor's Note: Because of the frankly surprising trend of the Literary Digest's 1936 straw vote The Star is emphasizing the following editorial by Bruce Catton, nationally-known commentator for NEA Service, our feature syndicate. Mr. Catton and The Star's publisher were classmates at Oberlin college in 1919-20. addition of approximately 125,000 poll ballots from metropolitan centers out of a total increase of 345,000 votes since last week's report.

Landon has a poll majority or plurality in thirty-two states while Roosevelt is shown carrying 16. In the Electoral College these states would divide 370 votes for Governor Landon to 161 for President Roosevelt.

A total of 2,158,739 votes is reported in the current poll tally. The Republican candidate gets 1,182,307 votes to the Democrat's 878,526 and the Union candidate's total of 75,119. The balance of 22,787 votes, or slightly over 1 per cent, is divided among the four minor candidates.

Landon receives his largest state vote in his home state of North Dakota where he is shown receiving a little over 12 per cent of the total vote.

Fans Warned Against Nashville Road

Detour Suggested to Blevins; Train Is Safest Method

Football 'Special' to Leave Hope at 5:45 o'clock Friday

RETURN TRIP 10:30

Roundtrip Fare 52 Cents, Plus 50 Cents Here for Game Tickets

Despite a two-day rain a large delegation of Hope football fans planned to board the Bobcat special train leaving here at 5:45 p. m. Friday for Nashville where southwest Arkansas' biggest high school grid battle will be fought at 8 o'clock.

The district highway office here issued a warning Friday morning to motorists, cautioning them that recent heavy maintenance on the Hope-Nashville road had made the highway dangerous for traffic.

The road is "bad," was the warning. "Rainfall the past 24 hours has made the road slippery and sloppy. Our advice to motorists would be to go from Hope to Blevins and then across on No. 24 to Nashville. The best and safest way is by train," the warning said.

Reports from Nashville Friday morning said that the football field would be slippery, but would not be covered by water. The field has a good drainage system and is well-sodded. Additional bleacher seats have been erected.

Coach Foy Hammons said Friday that his team was not worried over the weather conditions. "We expect a hard battle and we are prepared to give them one. We're all set to go," Hammons declared.

The coach asked that football fans purchase tickets now to avoid a rush at the last minutes. Tickets to the game are on sale at Hope Confectionery. They may be bought at 50 cents apiece.

Roundtrip fare on the Missouri Pacific special train is 52 cents. It leaves here at 5:45. The return trip will start at 10:30 o'clock, giving fans about half an hour to reach the train after the game.

The train will be stopped about two blocks from the football field.

Robinson Flayed by Smith at Chi

"Walking Up Dark Alley That Has Blind End," Says Ex-Democrat

CHICAGO, (P)—(P)—Alfred E. Smith said Thursday night that Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas, his running mate in the 1928 presidential campaign, "is walking in the dark up an alleyway with a blind end," in the present campaign.

Landon in Oklahoma

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla.—(P)—Governor Landon told Oklahomaans Friday that the New Deal had "deserted" the Democratic party's principles, violated "its oath to support and uphold the constitution," and "real Democrats I know will fight shoulder to shoulder with us in this battle to save our American form of government and our country."

Turned Brown By Brown Turner

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—(Special)—From the way they're talking about King Edward here lately you'd think he was running for President. Papers are saying now he's given Mrs. Simpson a necklace which gouged the royal pocketbook for $125,000, and that because the American woman found some dust on a vase in his house he went into a rage and canned a maid, all of which is the king's business. If Edward was kinging in the United States and did something out of the ordinary they'd call him a Communist, and the Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith, who's been kicked out of so many political organizations he wears a pillow in his pants, would have a new avenue to get some publicity. Have just been to a circus and the next time I get mad at somebody I'll call him an ant eater.

Roy House Is Put to Death by State

Murderer of Aged Man Dies in Electric Chair at Tucker Friday

TUCKER FARM, Ark.—(P)—Roy House, 22, died in the electric chair at dawn Friday for the robbery-killing of Tom Menser, aged Garland county recluse.

House walked unassisted to the chair at 6:40. Two charges were passed through his body before he was pronounced dead. Superintendent Tom Cogbill said he "went down as game as anyone I ever saw. He didn't seem like he was bothered a bit."

House thanked officials for their kindness, and said he had no feeling for anyone. He declared, "Whisky caused my downfall."

He reiterated the truthfulness of his previous statement saying that he had killed Menser while drunk, and absolving Ayliff Draper in the crime.

Lon Warneke Is Visitor on Friday

Former Cub Star Well Satisfied to Be With St. Louis Cards

Lon Warneke, former Chicago Cub pitcher now with the St. Louis Cardinals, was a guest in Hope for an hour Friday, stopping at Diamond cafe for luncheon.

Warneke was accompanied by his father and a Mr. Albright, the latter from St. Louis. They were en route to Hot Springs after several days' visit to the Texas Centennial at Dallas.

Warneke, whose home is at Mt. Ida, Ark., was recently traded to the Cardinals in a straight player deal which sent Ripper Collins, first baseman, and another player to the Cubs.

Warneke told interested baseball followers here that he was satisfied to be with the Cards and predicted that he would have a good season with the Cardinals next year.

Russia Pledges No Offensive Action in Spanish Crisis

Soviet Will "Pull Diplomatic Strings" to Aid Radical Government

PLIGHT DESPERATE

Spanish Government Virtually Abandons Madrid to Its Fate

By the Associated Press

Russia's spokesman, entering the neutrality debate in London, indicated Friday that Moscow will take no steps which might precipitate a European war.

They stated definitely that Russia will continue to make every diplomatic effort to thwart "Nazi and Fascist aid to the Spanish insurgents."

Unconfirmed reports said that a foreign steamer unloading arms for the government at Cartagena had been bombed and badly damaged by insurgent airplanes, and that 50 Soviet warplanes had arrived in Spanish government territory.

By the Associated Press

Fascist armies laid siege to Madrid Thursday night and forced government forces back into the environs of the capital.

Retreating from one town after another before the precise advance of the mechanized columns, the government defenders dug in at Mostoles, 10 miles from the heart of the capital, and in Torrejon de la Calzada, 15 miles from the city.

Mostoles is on a highway running southwest from Madrid to Navacerrada, captured by the insurgents. Torrejon is on a divergent highway out of Madrid between the capital city and Illescas, also held by the Fascists.

Fascists bands patrolled the countryside between the two units, thus driving the base of a triangle closer to Madrid.

Plan Move to Barcelona

The harassed government leaders, it was reported, had decided to move the seat of their capital to Barcelona, where President Manuel Azana and three high cabinet officials have already set up offices.

With this development, government leaders said, the Madrid forces would be able to make the civil war drag on indefinitely, no matter what the fate of Madrid, in the hope that sympathetic nations such as Russia might eventually offer concrete military aid before the Socialists' cause was irretrievably lost.

To the northwest of Madrid, Fascist guns pounded scattered government resistance in El Escorial sector.

Within Madrid, leaders installed a new supreme military chief and rushed a civilian reserve army of 10,000 men to the front.

General Pozos Commander

Gen. Jose Asensio was relieved of command of government forces in the Madrid area, and Gen. Sebastian Pozos was put in his place.

Pozos, the war ministry announced, was a tactical expert with long experience in military campaigns, and the Madrid government felt he might be able to direct a successful attempt to halt the Fascist Madrid attack.

The Workers Reserve Corps was to be used as a second line to bolster the retreating militia.

Insurgent engineers had their work cut out for them, throwing pontons across streams where bridges were blown up by the government retreat.

Fascist field headquarters were pushed from one sector to another, keeping up with the motorized advances.

Headquarters Near

The base of the insurgent General Verala was less than 20 miles from Madrid. From the heights near it, the lights of the besieged city could be seen at night.

As the roar of insurgent cannonading echoed over Madrid, women and children renewed their campaigns for more civilian volunteers to go to the front.

They roamed in bands throughout the streets, calling upon all able-bodied men to lay down their arms for rifles. "It is better to be heroes' widows than cowards' wives," the women screamed.

---And So, in the Last Chapter, the Lady Meets British King

With the romance of England's King and Baltimore, Md.'s Mrs. Wallis Simpson become a popular conversational topic throughout the world, here's a newly revealed picture calculated to add fuel to the fire of discussion. The question is: Are they—or are they not—holding hands? The "hand-holding" could be an illusion of perspective, or it could be an actuality and real indication of the strong link of friendship between the British monarch and the American woman. The picture was snapped by an amateur photographer as the King and Mrs. Simpson disembarked from the Royal Yacht on a recent cruise.

By CHARLES NORMAN
Associated Press Writer
(Last of a Series)

NEW YORK.—(P)—Perhaps the most envied woman in London today is the American-born Mrs. Ernest Simpson, friend and companion of Edward VIII. As Prince of Wales he was said to have waited two hours in a Biarritz beauty parlor while her hair was a-drying. That was enough to set her apart.

Her wit and charm and her aristocratic southern lineage—the blood of Maryland Warfields, Virginia Montagues is in her veins—brought her to the fore in the ultra-smart circles of the English capital.

Those who know Wallis Warfield Simpson even slightly are not surprised that her company is "preferred" by King Edward. Far from being a Yankee at his court, she is a southern belle, with a petite figure and jet-black hair, and a vivacious personality that makes it natural for her to address Edward Albert Christian George Andrew Patrick David as "Davey."

They met while the then prince was much in the company of the former Thelma Morgan, then Lady Furness, twin sister of Mrs. Gloria Vanderbilt. Mrs. Simpson used to accompany them—as friend and "chaperone"—on gay West End parties.

Now Mrs. Simpson is again following in Thelma's footsteps in suing her well-to-do commercial broker husband for divorce on charges of misconduct—the only grounds for divorce in England. Lady Furness divorced Viscount Furness in January, 1933.

The Simpsons were married in London on July 21, 1928—a second marriage for both.

Edward and the former belle from Baltimore are nearly of an age—he is 42, she 40—and they liked each other from the start. He loves to dance; she is an accomplished dancer. At her Brynaton Court home he found her laxative and goodly company over a cup of tea poured by a charming woman entirely at her ease in his presence.

(Once, when some of his subjects were standing embarrassedly about, Edward exclaimed: "Oh, for heaven's sake, sit down!")

At first he sent her flowers. Soon court circulars announcing dinner parties at York house or St. James' palace often ended: "Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Simpson."

Cruise A Climax

The climax came this summer when the palatial yacht Nahlin was loaded with provisions, including champagne from the royal cellars, for Edward's vacation cruise in the Mediterranean and Adriatic. A select circle of friends accompanied him; among them was Mrs. Simpson.

Eyebrows went up, tongues wagged. Harassed British editors, seeking to

10 Bullets Fired From Woods Near Alexandria Friday

No One Hit, Although Sleeping Passenger Has Narrow Escape

GUNMEN GET AWAY

2 More Bridges Burn on Branch Line in Louisiana Parish

NEW ORLEANS, La.—(P)—Officials of the Louisiana & Arkansas Railway Co. reported Friday that a volley of bullets was fired on the Shreveport-New Orleans train shortly after the train pulled out of Alexandria.

No one was hit. The crew found no trace of the assailants.

Company officials said one bullet crashed through a Pullman window, barely missing a sleeping passenger.

Other shots rained off the locomotive and the sides of the coaches. The company report said about 10 shots were fired from a clump of woods. Officials expressed the belief that more than one person was engaged in the shooting.

2 More Bridges Burn

SHREVEPORT, La.—(P)—Railroad agents and local officers Thursday added two more burned bridges to incidents they were investigating along lines of the Louisiana and Arkansas Railroad Company in Louisiana since a strike of transportation workers of the railroad went into effect September 12.

The bridges were burned on the company's branch line between Jonesville and Ferriday in Concordia parish, but origin of the fire was undetermined.

A 150-foot wooden structure was destroyed at the "Black Water crossing" on a curve near Jonesville, said a "top" span burned between Athol and Moro.

Officials of the railroad said both bridges would have to be replaced, before service could be resumed.

Farm Sales Reach an All-Time Peak

9 Months This Year Better Than Any Past 12 of St. Louis Bank

More farms have been sold by the Federal Land Bank of St. Louis in less than nine months of 1936 than during any previous 12 months period in its history, J. M. Huston, vice-president and treasurer of the bank, announces.

For the eight months ending August 31, 730 farms for approximately $1,800,000 had been sold in the states of Illinois, Missouri and Arkansas, comprising the St. Louis District.

Sales have been numerous throughout the year, the announcement says, but reached their peak during the three months of June, July and August. The unusual activity during the early summer months when farm real estate sales are ordinarily dull, is attributed to improved farm prices, veterans' buying, and greater opportunities for young farmers and tenants.

Most of the farms have been purchased by families as farm homes with relatively few for investment purposes. The farms sold during 1936 have averaged 130 acres. The price received per acre by the Federal Land Bank of St. Louis to date this year has averaged approximately 34 per cent more for the three states combined than during the low prices of 1932.

Low interest costs combined with greater purchasing power of farm products make farm debt much easier to carry now than four years ago, Mr. Huston said, in explaining the increased number of transactions.

He pointed out that the cost of carrying a $1,000 Federal land bank loan on a farm purchased from the bank required only 76 bushels of corn in August, 1936, instead of 321 as in August, 1932. For wheat, the comparison was 76 bushels instead of 201; cotton, 766 pounds instead of 1250 pounds; hogs, 4 head of 200-pounders instead of 10; and for beef cattle 1225 pounds instead of 1553.

The Family Doctor

Poisoning, Eyestrain, Dissipation Responsible for Many Headaches

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

Among sinuses to which headache may be traced are the maxillary sinuses. These are in the cheeks above the upper row of teeth. An infection here is more likely to cause pain above the eye than in the sinus itself, although pain is also felt frequently in the upper jaw.

There are other sinuses in the skull, back of the nose. Pains from infection in these may be felt in the back of the head and sometimes in the ear, on the side involved.

Another type of headache results from poisoning by alcohol, tobacco, ether, lead or other materials. A careful investigation of the patient's condition may show that he is regularly absorbing some of these poisons into his body. Prevention of exposure to such poisons will cure the headache.

In certain cases, although not so frequently as was formerly thought to be the case, headaches are associated with eyestrain or with other disturbances of the eye. Suitable examination by a specialist in diseases of the eye will show whether the patient requires glasses, and will indicate also whether there are changes in the blood vessels which enter the eye.

A famous British specialist in diseases of the eye found that 240 to 1000 people who came to him for examination of the eyes complained of headaches.

Usually a headache due to eye disturbances is just behind the eyes. In rare cases it is in back of the head. Infrequently it may be at the side of the head or at the top.

Headaches from over-use of the eyes usually occur late in the afternoon or at the end of the day's work. Occasionally, however, these appear early in the morning because of overwork on the previous day.

There also are early morning headaches due to dissipation on the previous night. A person with that kind of headache always knows the cause of his trouble.

Another form of headache is that caused by motion pictures. This type was more frequent in the early days of the movies than it is now. Elimination of flickering, reduction of screen size, and modern types of illumination in motion pictures houses have been helpful.

In the old days there were frequent, sudden changes from light to darkness. The same effect was felt when moviegoers looked from the screen into the complete darkness of the theater. These sudden contractions and dilations of the pupil of the eye brought about much fatigue and headache.

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

Children Acquire Self-Confidence Through Making Own Decisions

Having written about the virtue of children being able to make up their own minds, here I am, writing about it again. But this time, I am asking parents to take stock of their own reactions when the child does make up his mind to do something. What generally happens?

Suppose Jimmy announces that he has decided to go with Bill to the movies instead of doing his composition for Friday. It is now Tuesday and Jimmy has two more days to get it done.

Try to Take Boy's View. Now, from the angle of work first and pleasure afterward, the whole thing seems simple. You say instantly that he must get right at his composition. He can go to the movie on Thursday. Or, if he is extra-industrious, tomorrow. But suppose we look at the boy's reasons. He was kept in for spelling. He came home and went on two errands. Then he ate his arithmetic. Now he is so tired that he feels he can't touch a pencil again. Besides, this is a special movie. You, yourself, said it was excellent for the boys to see, what with all the news reel review of the past decade and all.

Jimmy is not analyzing his reasons, but you are. You think he is hedging. It is the first thing almost any parent thinks. And, quite frequently, they are right. But it happens that Jimmy is a conscientious chap, and may be depended on, as a rule, to do what he says. However, your worry must be met. So you say, "I wouldn't do that. I would get the composition written first." If you didn't say that you would be most unusual.

You are right—but so is Jimmy. He has to get something out of his system, just as you feel that you have to read the paper, or listen to the radio before you do the dishes.

Suppose it is not pleasure, but a little matter of dressing that Jimmy has made up his mind about. He comes down with a red tie, and a pink shirt. He has decided that is what he likes for the moment. Your sense of taste is offended, you say. "For goodness sake, go and get your brown tie."

No Chance to Decide. Right again. The parent usually is. But when and where, I ask you, is the child to assert his decisions and make up his own mind? Almost always his preferences will conflict with yours.

After a while he begins to doubt his judgment. Or is so certain of contradiction that he asks first what he'd better do.

And later, a certain habit is generated in the parent, also. So sure the child lacks freedom of choice, she begins automatically to veto the vote.

This is called negativism, although there is more behind the word than that. The naturally inhibited person extends these restrictions to others. In order not to rob the child of his occasional decisions, it pays, I think, to let him make mistakes rather than lose the will of making up his mind. There are so many unimportant things in which we meddle. Some day we may wonder why Jimmy is always on a fence or waiting for something to turn up.

HOLLYWOOD

By Paul Harrison

Few Actresses Will Sacrifice Glamour For Art

HOLLYWOOD.—Most screen queens are skittish when it comes to appearing before the cameras in paper curlers, cold cream, or tatters. They don't like being messed up, even for the sake of their art.

Consequently, these celluloid goddesses survive shipwrecks, night club brawls, explosions, and sleepless nights, emerging from any and all catastrophes looking as though they had just come from a sitting with a portrait photographer.

If clothes must be torn during hazardous movie experiences, they are torn artistically and under the expert supervision of a fashion designer. And if a million-dollar face just has to be smeared with grease or mud, it's smudged by a makeup expert, to accen-uate cuteness rather than realism. True, not all stars are so particular. A few take their roles seriously enough to appear in strictly non-esthetic sequences. Luise Rainer, Bette Davis, and Carole Lombard are the leading lady exponents of screen realism, however unsightly.

Mary Astor, Sylvia Sydney and Jean Harlow are others who dare risk the disillusionment of their fans. Acid test is not always whether they'll consent to look dowdy or disheveled for the movies, but whether they'll allow still pictures to be made.

Snubs Slightly Roles

On the other side of the fence are numerous actresses who feel faint at the very thought of wearing frayed gingham or playing in bag makeup.

A Good Time for a Round-the-World Speed Trip

Marlene Dietrich always looks her best, reasons she quit Paramount's "Hotel It is said that one of the principal reasons she would have had to portray a dowdy peasant.

Kay Francis, Joan Crawford and Norma Shearer, generally considered the three best-dressed women in Hollywood, guard that status carefully on the screen. They never look like the devil when unexpected callers arrive. They answer telephone calls at 3 a. m., and the bedside cloths show them perfectly coiffed and looking fresh as daisies.

They diligently avoid roles which would present them in runover heels and bargain counter frocks.

Maybe you remember "Private Worlds" and the fit of insanity tossed by Joan Bennett. She obliged her director with a swell performance, but after the ordeal there wasn't a line in her face or a single hair out of place.

Bette Davis rather seems to enjoy going frowsy occasionally. She should, her portrayal of a dissipated derelict in "Dangerous" helped win the last Motion Picture Academy Award for acting. She had a similar part in "Of Human Bondage" and gave everybody the shudders.

Art Champs First

All-time champion of uncomplimentary makeup and costume, though, is Luise Rainer. As Olan in "The Good Earth," she has been working for months in tattered, dirty clothes, with straggly hair, and with makeup deliberately applied to leave her as plain, vacuous, and uninteresting as possible. Beside Olan, any one of the Jukes sisters would look like Miss America.

This probably is the first picture ever made in which a beautiful star who is shown in unflattering scenes doesn't eventually get advance to leave her cinematic chimney corner and assume her rightful glory. Miss Rainer plays it straight.

Two recent films have threatened the spick-and-span glamour of Miss Lombard. In "Love Before Breakfast" she took a dip in the sea and wound up in a blanket, her hair down, and she sneezing all over the place. In "My Man Godfrey" William Powell pushed into a shower, and screen history was made when an actress emerg-

CHRISTIANITY AS LOVE
Devotional Readings John 15:12-17

In Athens, which represented the center of Grecian art, religion, and culture, Paul preached the famous sermon on Mars Hill. This sermon, fortunately, has been recorded in the 17th chapter of Acts. From Athens he went to Corinth, which was called "the eye of Greece," a great commercial center that also rivaled the greater Athens in its culture and magnificence.

In Corinth, where commercial prosperity and outward splendor covered depths of vice and licentiousness, Paul found two of his own race, Aquila and his wife, Priscilla, with whom Paul had the additional bond of a fellow craftsman, for all were tentmakers. Here in Corinth, living with Aquila and Priscilla and working at his trade from day to day, he supported himself while he carried on his real work as a Christian missionary and evangelist. Every Sabbath, we are told, he spoke in the synagogue, bringing his Christian teaching to both Jews and Greeks.

What was the quality of this religious work that Paul was doing in the ancient city? What was there about it that was real, and permanent, and of genuine interest for today?

The answer to this is found in an important letter, one of the great letters of Paul, addressed to the Christians in the church that he established at Corinth. This is what we call the 13th chapter of First Corinthians which, as divided into verses in our King James version, has 13 verses, corresponding to its number in the book.

Here is Paul's great eulogy of love as the basic fact of true religion and of all that is fine and best in man's relations with his fellowmen.

Henry Drummond, in this little booklet that he wrote about this chapter called love "the greatest thing in the world," and this chapter is certainly the greatest sermon or exposition that ever dealt with love.

In the King James version, the stateliness and beauty of the periods failed to suggest the truer and deeper meaning, because the word "charity," which in later versions has been rendered as "love," has come to have a more limited meaning than it had when the early translators did their work.

With the substitution of the word "love," the depth and fullness in the thought have been emphasized and brought into harmony with the richness and power of Paul's eloquence.

Love is the one great requisite of true living. Prophecy, charity, faith, all are nothing if there be not the reality of love. Love is the source and flowering of all the virtues. It is allied with truth, and beauty, and righteousness; and it is the one abiding and permanent thing where all else fails in a changing universe.

Love is the secret of understanding and the enlarged life. As a later poet has expressed it, inspired by Paul's own great poem, ed from such an experience actually dripping wet.

"Race after race hath cut its likeness of Its Maker, as the eyes grew large with love."

Sylvia Sydney didn't look especially fetching while covered with mud and wearing ragged clothes in "Trail of the Lonesome Pine." Jean Harlow was scarcely at her best when she took that bath in a rain barrel for a scene in "Red Dust." Mary Astor gave her fans the jitters by going mad in "The World Changes." She dared to become realistically disheveled.

Heroes, Fastidious, Too. I've been talking about women, but just as much could be said about talkietown's handsome heroes. Director George Cukor believes they're more fastidious than actresses. Most of 'em hate to wear ill-fitting clothes, or to appear dissipated or even mussed up with honorable dirt.

Look at the well-manicured hands of the leading man, when he's playing garage mechanic. Look at your celluloid idol who has been shipwrecked on an island. Chances are he'll consent to grow a stubble of manly beard—but, no matter how many months he has been marooned, his hair will remain neatly trimmed!

Career That Gave U. S. "Gibson Girl"

There may never have been a mortal woman who looked quite as lovely, as patrician, and as soulfully, wholesomely good as the Gibson girl looked. But for a great many years people figured that even if women didn't look like that, they ought to. As a result, Charles Dana Gibson became rich and famous.

There is a richly entertaining account of Gibson's life in an autobiography by Fairfax Downey—"Portrait of an Era" (Scriner's; $3.50). It includes reproductions of some scores of Gibson's sketches, and you'll find it a book with which to sit up nights.

Gibson was born with a remarkable talent. He did not care much about drawing, as a child, but he somehow had a miraculous knack for cutting silhouettes out of paper. At the age of 6 or 7, or thereabouts, he was doing it like a professional. An artistic career was indicated, obviously.

His parents started by sending him to a sculptor, when he got along into his teens. But it soon became clear that sculptor wasn't it. He turned to sketching, put in a miserable two years or so trying to peddle his drawings—and, finally, clicked with the humorous magazine, Life.

That started it. Before long the Gibson girl made her bow. Her creator promptly became famous and wealthy. His dazzling female became a national institution.

She made Gibson her prisoner. He had talents as a cartoonist, but the tyrannical lassie would not let him develop them. He wanted to become a painter, but she chained him to his sketching block.

Only now, an old man in retirement, is he able to follow his old yen to play around with oils.

Mr. Downey has put together a remarkably interesting book. The older you are, the better you'll like it.

ON DISPLAY at all Buick Showrooms

SPECIAL CENTURY ROADMASTER LIMITED

FOUR WONDROUS NEW REASONS WHY:
"It's Buick again!"

SENSATIONAL is the fervor with which the American public has taken to its heart the brilliant motor cars offered by Buick this year.

Indeed, the sweeping success of the 1936 Buick program flatly challenged us and our great parent General Motors to a momentous decision.

Should we continue this amazingly popular line of cars into next year, perhaps the prudent thing to do—or should we dare broad improvement upon their spectacular excellence?

We felt there was only one right answer to that question, the bold and progressive answer—and that's why insiders now forecasting 1937 are already saying: "It's Buick again!"

That's why on top of $15,000,000 recently spent re-tooling and re-equipping Buick's great plant, we appropriated and are now spending $14,500,000 more.

That's why every car in the 1937 Buick line—the SPECIAL, the CENTURY, the ROADMASTER and the LIMITED—is a triumph visibly and intrinsically outfranking anything we have ever done.

Each has more beauty for dazzling style, more power for breath-taking action, more room for full-family comfort, more downright "road-command" for safety and pleasure.

See them—then you'll know why Buick's soaring sales curve is headed for yet loftier altitudes next year.

YOU'VE GOT WHAT IT TAKES!
$765
You can afford the new Buick. It's easy to buy and thrifty to own. With all its quality, its phenomenal performance and stunning style, prices start as low as $765. General Motors terms to suit your liking. Safety glass included. accessories extra. Price subject to change without notice.

The Jett B. Graves Sunday school class of the First Methodist church entertained at a very delightful Halloween party Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. W. O. Shipley on East Third street, with Mrs. Chas. Thomas, Mrs. Mildred Betts and Miss Rose Harris as hostesses. The Halloween motif was stressed in the decorations, games and refreshments. The guests came in the traditional spook costumes and the fun of the evening began with the receiving line, and clever stunts were carried out through the evening. With Mrs. Herbert Stucky and Mrs. Elmer Brown receiving prizes as star stunts. Interesting favors were fortunes concealed in peanut shells, and the pinnacle of the Halloween motif was reached in the refreshments, delicious pumpkin pie and coffee.

Mrs. Carol Brown of Little Rock arrived Friday for a visit with her sister, Mrs. Chas. Routon Jr., and Mr. Routon.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Ruby Helen Betts of Little Rock and William Stephenson, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Stephenson of this city. The marriage was solemnized Thursday night, at the home of the officiating minister, Rev. Fred R. Harrison pastor of the First Methodist church.

Mrs. George S. Spragins left Wednesday for Los Angeles, Calif., where she will spend the winter with her daughter, Miss Janie Spragins and son, George Spragins and Mrs. Spragins.

Brother and Sister Are Stars in Cole-Clyde Beatty Circus

Chester and Viola Barnett

When old man depression came along the latter part of 1920, Miss Viola Barnett, 21 years old and pretty and her brother Chester Barnett, 23 years old, held in their hands a certificate of graduation from the University of Louisiana

Although they had been ahead of their classes in the academic department they soon found there was, seemingly, no demand for highly educated youngsters. So afflicted with a yen to see the world, Young Barnett had an artist to draw an attractive letterhead showing himself as a clown and his sister as a daring girl on the flying trapeze—not exactly ethical, even though they were determined to obtain work.

In college they had been athletic, so assiduously, they began to train. Chester studied the life and history of clowning in several languages. At the same time Viola practiced and practiced aerial work. In less than a year's time they became quite proficient. Enough so to obtain a job with a vaudeville unit and later with a small wagon show.

Then the flashy letter head came in to advantage. They wrote the Cole Bros. Circus then playing in Europe, obtained a contract and fare to join the show in Hamburg, Germany. They made good in a capable way and in recent years the brother has forged rapidly to the top until today he is also at the head-of the clown class. While sister Viola has ascended in the aerial firmament as a top-notch.

Since returning from a tour of Continental Europe the Cole Bros. Circus has effected to consolidate with Clyde Beatty's gigantic wild animal exhibition. The big show is coming to Hope on Saturday, October 31, for performances at 2 and 8 p. m. Doors to the immense zoological collection will be opened at 1 and 7 p. m. On the downtown streets at 11 a. m. preceding the initial exhibition, a colossal and spectacular street parade will be seen.

leaders. The total number of electoral votes reported represented by doubtful states is 237, out of the 531. In addition, several other states are said to be on the fence.

An enormous registration of voters from both parties and recurrent rumors of scandal in WPA fund handling have thrown Pennsylvania into an uncertain position. Here again, Republicans claim a large plurality in suburban and farming districts, while New Dealers are delighted with their strength in the cities.

Of the other candidates in this semi final report of the Poll, Lemke has 75,119 votes for his Union Party. "Norman Thomas, Socialist, follows with 10,441; Earl Browder, Communist, 7,767; D. Leigh Colvin, Prohibitionist, 3,538; John Y. Aiken, Socialist-Labor, 584; all others, 457.

Porkers Off for Battle With L. S. U. Team

Old Rivalry to Be Renewed Saturday

Jack Robbins, Arkansas Star, Reported "Ready to Go" Against Tigers

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark.—(P)—Twenty-line members of the University of Arkansas football squad entrained late Thursday for Shreveport to renew a 31-year-old rivalry with Louisiana State University.

The Razorbacks will be the underdog in the game at the Louisiana State Fair, with the strong Southeast Conference team, rated by some experts as the nation's second strongest team.

Jack Robbins, Arkansas' great pitcher, may not start although he has made rapid strides toward recovery from an ankle injury. Allen Keen, who scored the only Arkansas touchdown against Louisiana last year, will start with the handicap of a bruised leg.

Bobbie Martin, Arkansas' leading blocking back, is expected to see the game from the sidelines. B. A. Owen, place-kicking guard, is the only ailing lineman.

Players making the trip were: Ends, Benton, Hamilton, Hunter, N. Gordon, Brodie and Withers; tackles, Van Eickel, Lalman, Corbett, Spillers and Stallings; guards, Sanders, Gilmore, B. A. Owen, D. Martin and Roberts; centers, Lundy, Donaldson and Waddell; backs, B. Martin, Robbins, Keen, Holt, Sloan, Rawlings, Fletcher, Montgomery, Brown and N. Martin.

A special train carrying fans and the university band will leave Friday night.

Jack Robbins To Play

FORT SMITH, Ark.—(P)—Coach Fred Thomsen said Thursday night that Jack Robbins, quarterback and chief pilot of the University of Arkansas team, was "ready to go" against Louisiana State University Saturday at Shreveport.

Thomsen said there is a possibility that Robbins may not start, but he "will definitely play." He said Robbins' ankle injury has "come along nicely" this week.

B. A. Owen, place-kicking guard on the ailing list, also will play, but Obbie Martin, blocking back, is out for the Louisiana game he said.

Thomsen brought his Razorback squad down from Fayetteville to spend the night at Shreveport, resuming the journey early Friday. He plans to arrive in Shreveport early enough for a light workout Friday afternoon.

May Raise Dickens With Duke

Duke University's undefeated, untied Blue Devils, on their road to the championship of the south and a possible trip to the Rose Bowl, face the biggest obstacle in their path for the rest of the year in Tennessee. Wallace Wade's boys face the Vols in Knoxville, Oct. 24, and here is one of Maj. Bob Neyland's young men who may raise the Dickens with Duke's hopes. He is Phil Dickens, triple-threat performer, back in form after breaking an ankle last year.

Blytheville Wins From Walnut Ridge

Chicks Run String of Victories to 24 With 45 to 0 Triumph

WALNUT RIDGE—Coach Carnie Leslie's Blytheville Chicks ran up their string of consecutive wins to 24 here Thursday night by taking the Walnut Ridge Bob Cats 45 to 0 before an unusually large crowd.

The Chicks strengthened their claims for state honors by predominating throughout. Russell Mosely, brother of the all-state and all-Southern back from Blytheville last year, and Bronco Brown, Chick fullback bore the brunt of the visitors' attack.

A wet field hindered the play of both teams and prevented a great deal of the deception and effectiveness characteristic of both elevens.

Bailey, Kell, Callahan and Smith stood out for Walnut Ridge.

Buckingham Hostess?

For six weeks the tongues of empire wagged; finally the $1,390,000 yacht bearing the Duke of Lancaster (Edward's cognomen) and his party returned to English waters. In the group that accompanied Edward to his Scottish castle of Balmoral was Mrs. Simpson. She is now in London in a new home in Cumberland Terrace, in fashionable Regents Park, a mile from Buckingham palace. Her husband has taken up lodgings at his club.

On October 1, in keeping with tradition, Queen Mary, no longer a reigning sovereign, removed to Marlborough house, leaving the question of a hostess at Buckingham palace up in the air.

Whether it will be Mrs. Simpson is a subject dear to the hearts of West End dowagers and the smart set generally.

Blow-Off Awaits 3 Yankee Players

DiMaggio, Crosetti and Tony Lazzeri to Be Honored at San Francisco

By SAM JACKSON

SAN FRANCISCO—(P)—The Lazzeris, the Crosettis, the Di Maggios and their compatriots are ready for the big blow-off.

It will be staged in a locale where blow-offs are rather common—San Francisco's Italian quarter. But this promises to be something special in the way of a festa.

Their countrymen for a long time have been proud of Tony Lazzeri and Frankie Crosetti, the Italian colony's established baseball idols.

But it took the ballyhoo and sub-sequence performance of young Joe Di Maggio in his first year with the New York Yankees to raise local baseball consciousness to fever heat.

The fact that all three helped drive the Yankees to the American league pennant and world championship of 1936 has not hurt any.

Now the Yankees' Italian triumvirate is going to be welcomed home in royal style.

Di Maggio already has been met at the ferry by Mayor Angelo Rossi, followed by a host of dignitaries, and quite, self-effacing Lazzeri and his Crosetti, unmarried like Di Maggio.

DOUBLE-TEAMING A BEAR

Not only was the University of California at Los Angeles' victory over California a collective headache to the Berkeley Bears, but it also caused no little individual pain in the noggin of Bill Archer, California halfback. During the 17-6 U. C. L. A. victory, Archer, center, in an end-around play, was double-teamed by George Dickerson, left, and Pete Barber, right, opposing tackles, and bumped heads with Dickerson. The expression on Archer's face tells the story.

Landis Splits Big World Series Melon

27 Yankee Players Get $6,430 Each; Giants Receive $4,655

NEW YORK—(P)—Kenesaw Mountain Landis, commissioner of baseball, officially cut the largest world series melon in history Thursday when he mailed checks to the Yankees and Giants and players of the other first division clubs in each league.

Corresponding closely to unofficial figures calculated after the all-New York battle was concluded, each full share for the Yankees amounted to $6,430.55 while the "cut" for the Giants is $4,655.59, a new record for the beaten club's share.

The Yankees split a total of $193,201.12 among 36 players, officials and club expenses while the Giants divided $128,880.74 among 32 individuals. Each club awarded 27 full shares.

The total world series receipts of $1,304,399, including $100,000 from the radio rights, as well as the total players' pool of $460,002.66, set new records. The previous record receipts were $1,207,564 in 1926. The biggest players' pool previously amounted to $419,736.60. The Yankees have participated in all the record-making.

This remainder of the players' share, totaling $138,000.80 goes to the second, third and fourth place clubs in each league.

As undisputed winner of runnerup honors in the American League, the Detroit Tigers, 1936 world champions, draw $34,500.20. The St. Louis Cardinals and Chicago Cubs, who tied for second and third in the National League, each split $28,750.11.

The Chicago White Sox, third in the American circuit, get $23,000.13. The two fourth place clubs, Washington Senators and Pittsburgh Pirates, collect $11,500.07, each.

wife have reopened their pleasant cottage down the peninsula.

Parents Invited

The celebration, tentatively slated for early November, awaits the plans of Crosetti, who delayed his return home.

The scene will be the Italian Athletic club, which recently opened a costly new building in the heart of the North Beach Italian district. None of the three is a member now, but Di Maggio has played for the club and the others are bound to it by many ties of friendship.

Parents of all three will share in the festivities.

Di Maggio's father and some of his brothers are crab fishermen, and after a few discouragements at the beginning of his baseball career, Joe almost joined them in the business. The elder Di Maggio speaks little English, Joe's mother, none. Out of season, Joe always has been very much the home boy and escort to his four admiring sisters.

On his arrival home Joe denied he was engaged to a New York girl.

Parents of all three will share in the festivities.

Crosetti's Single Too

Lazzeri's parents live across the city from the principal Italian colony, but in and near "Butchertown" there are numerous fellow countrymen and this lesser colony has its own athletic club and traditions.

Owing to the fact he has been up in the big time so long that his efforts are taken as a matter of course and to the additional fact that he made his early baseball reputation in Salt Lake City instead of in San Francisco, Lazzeri has perhaps less of a personal following in his home town than the other two. His father is a trucker.

Crosetti, unmarried like Di Maggio.

Center Position Hardest On Team

Man in Middle of Line Must Be Cool-Headed Says Auburn's Captain

AUBURN, Ala.—(P)—Walter Gilbert, Auburn's center, believes the position he plays is football's toughest—center.

"The man in the middle is the stepchild of the football team," observes the Auburn captain. "He's always getting the blame, whether it's for fumbles by backs or collapse of the line on charges near the goal."

Gilbert believes a center, above all things, should be coolheaded under fire.

Weighing 200 and standing 6 feet 1 inch, Gilbert has starred in football at Auburn since his sophomore year. He now is a senior.

Fast, brainy and with an accurate snapper-back, he won all-Southern conference honors and all-America mention last season.

"As far as Auburn is concerned," Meagher declares, "Gilbert is this year's all-America center."

The good-looking athlete says he has no Rose Bowl aspirations for the team he captains and believes the extroverts were unfair in touting the Tigers so highly before the season got under way.

Gilbert is 20 and prepped at Darlington school in Rome, Ga. His home is at Fairfield, Ala.

Ill Wind Blows No Good When Long Punts Needed—Weather Cause of Many Upsets

Snow and Mud Hold Down Offensive Thrust of Both Teams, Cause Frequent Fumbling Which Gives "Breaks" in Football Battles

By BERNIE BIERMAN

Head Coach, University of Minnesota

MINNEAPOLIS—Climate conditions have more to do with football upsets than any other factor. Singling out the one weather element that is the greatest game wrecker of all, I have found that wind is the most aggravating we have to combat.

I can recall several games my teams have been in that were settled by this factor. One I'll never forget is the 1932 game Minnesota played with Wisconsin.

It snowed all morning. About an hour before game time, a terrific gale came up. Punting was almost impossible against the wind, and neither team could get anywhere in the mud.

We went into the last quarter trailing, 3-0. The Badgers had scored on a long field goal, the wind being behind the kicker and making the try successful.

But the gale finally gave us a break, too. Wisconsin tried to kick. The punt was well handled from every standpoint. But once it got into the air, it didn't go anywhere; in fact, it was blown backward.

Our receivers made no attempt to catch the ball, and it dropped and rolled to the Wisconsin one or two-yard line, from where we plunged over for the winning corner.

Wind Gave Gophers Jump

Another experience I had was in an Iowa-Minnesota battle in Iowa City. Both teams were figured to be about the same strength. On the morning of the game the wind was howling, and I don't believe I ever worried so much about a contest that we eventually won by such a decisive margin.

It was the break of winning the toss that made the difference. We got the wind, and the Hawkeyes decided to kick off against it. The ball traveled only slightly more than 30 yards, and, after a fine return, we pushed over a couple of plays later for a touchdown. That development so discouraged Iowa that the game became a rout, and we won by five or six touchdowns.

Pittsburgh's defeat at the hands of Duquesne is one example of how weather figures in the outcome of a game. Southern California's tie with Washington State is another; in fact, hardly a week goes by without some surprising results brought about by a heavy field or a downpour of rain.

While Duquesne always plays top-notch football against Pitt, its home town rival, it wasn't considered in the same class with the Panthers, especially after Jack Sutherland's team had beaten Ohio State. Yet, the slippery field and rain slowed up the Pitt offense so much that the Panthers didn't look anything like the team that had overpowered the Buckeyes.

Heat Hard on Northerners

Southern California played in the rain at Urbana against Illinois, and Howard Jones said it was the first time in many years that his team had such an experience. Though the Trojans defeated Illinois in the wet going, they went back home and ran into some more rain against Washington State and couldn't get their flashy offense to click.

Change in temperatures makes a big difference in football. Quite often a northern team will invade the south

Only Two College Games in Arkansas

State Teachers Play at Magnolia, Monticello Meets Louisiana Team

LITTLE ROCK—Arkansas college football fans have a light week-end of the pigskin sport Friday and Saturday with only four games scheduled, two of them out of the state.

The Bears of Arkansas State Teachers College carry their campaign for the state championship another step forward Friday night at Magnolia against the luckless Magnolia A. & M. Mulderiders. Coach Warren Woodson expects to start his regulars despite the fact that Mulderiders have failed to score in four games thus far.

On the same night Bo Sherman's Monticello A. & M. Bollweevils entertain LSU Northeast Center of Monroe, La. The Weevils went a final hard scrimmage Wednesday without injury and appear to be in top shape. It will be Monticello's last night home game of the season.

Couzens, Once

erator, Couzens came to Detroit in 1890 and obtained a $40-a-month job as a railroad car checker. Later he worked in the offices of A. Y. Malcomson, a coal dealer, who advanced $3,000 for Ford's automobile company in 1903 and named Couzens to represent him. The young Couzens was allowed to subscribe for $2,500 in stock and became secretary of the company.

Couzens served as street railway commissioner, police commissioner and mayor of Detroit before he went to the senate. As mayor he was put off a street car for refusal to pay an increased fare; four years later he saw the city take over the line at a cost of $19,850,000.

England's 1934 birthrate was 14.4 per 1,000 of population, the lowest on record.

and run into the extreme heat that often bobs up during the season in Dixie.

When at Tulane, I saw several outstanding elevens come to New Orleans from the north. Frequently they were beaten by far larger scores than they should have been, just because high temperatures sapped their strength so much during the first half that they wilted in the second.

A middle western or eastern team invading California usually finds it difficult to get accustomed to the change in climate, as it takes at least a week for a squad from either of these sections to become acclimated.

However, having erred, she deserves all the sympathy, human kindness, and consideration of which a civilized people are capable. That she should be dragged before a court is bad enough. That the doors should have been opened wide and the story heralded to the four corners of the world is travesty on our peculiar system of justice and mercy.

Not for a moment are we condoning murder—if such is the name for what happened in that terrified moment.

Special Tribunal Should Hear Cases

A tribunal of mercy and justice and kindness, where problems could be viewed with deep understanding and compassion, when they concern a situation such as the one confronting Elizabeth Smith, would be a worthy addition to any government. Then, whatever punishment or aid need be rendered could be given without the added scars of a public branding. We condemned the early Puritans who compelled people to live forever with the memory of wrong-doing instead of being allowed to grow strong and forget—in so much as one can forget. There is need for care lest the pendulum, in our maddened whirl of living and doing, swing back to that cruel extremity.

GRIDIRON HEROES

BACK in 1903 Walter Eckersall, weighing 128 pounds, entered the University of Chicago. In one year the "little giant" became the talk of football.

Eckersall, a quarterback, made the varsity in his freshman year. He scored a 52-yard touchdown against Illinois, and three field goals against Wisconsin.

He had an extremely educated toe, and twice during his career registered five field goals—against Wisconsin and Nebraska.

Eckersall is looked upon in Marion animals as the greatest star Chicago ever produced. He was an excellent field general, could snake his way down the field with the best of them, and never flinched before the drive of backs nearly twice his size. For three successive years he made Walter Camp's All-America squad.
